

Number of homeschooled students whose parents reported particular reasons for homeschooling as being applicable to their situation and as being their most important reason for homeschooling: 2003

Values are by the 1,000

- Applicable
- Most Important

Reasons for homeschooling

These include safety, drugs, or negative peer pressure. Parents homeschool their children for many reasons that are often unique to their family situation. "Other reasons" parents gave for home schooling include: It was the child's choice; to allow parents more control over what child was learning; and flexibility. NOTE: Excludes students who were enrolled in school for more than 25 hours a week and students who were homeschooled only because of a temporary illness.